WASHINGTON - The Soviet Union has offered to halt construcuon on a radar in central Siberia in return for the United States forgoing plans to modernize radars in Britain and Greenland, according to U.S. and Soviet officials.

Air passengers eager to avoid waiting and fearful of lost or damaged baggage are stretching the concept of carry-on luggage to epic proportions, according to a government inspection and testimony to the Federal Aviation Administration.

been most vocal in demanding a crackdown, the airlines have been reluctant to enforce existing limitations for fear of driving passengers to a more permissive rival.

Many airlines have seemingly encouraged passengers to carry more aloft by greatly expanding the size of the overhead compartments.

New boarding procedures also work against close supervision of carry-on luggage. Many airlines, in an effort to streamline procedures, assign seats and give out boarding passes in advance, allowing passengers to go directly to the departure gates if they want.

The passengers have their own side of the story.

Lose track of consumer demand and company supply in any one country and you risk losing out on the business.

International Business Services
– from IBM – have the answer.
Providing worldwide data systems that can connect all your offices, factories and distribution outlets.

And offering universal applications software that will make every market feel as familiar as home territory.

For example, we can help a Swedish toy manufacturer send surplus rubber ducks winging across Europe towards more profitable southern markets.

By providing an international on-line order system that lets headquarter's personnel book orders and review stock country by country – while still on the phone with the customer.

IBS specialists can develop the right management systems for any company and its subsidiaries, linking each location, via minicomputers for example, to International Business Services.

Making it easy for our toy company to know when the time is right to send those Swedish ducks south to meet rising demand on Swiss lakes or Spanish beaches.

What's more, all company staff can share the same flexible software – Application System – (just one of the many products available from IBS), enabling everyone to work in his own national language.

Production planning becomes more efficient, too.

With headquarters and all subsidiaries using the same system, sharing the same information.

All contributing to tighter control over stock levels and lower administrative costs. Whether you're shipping toy ducks, or any other product around the world.

To find out how International Business Services can help your company increase operational efficiency, send us the coupon below, or phone direct.

Because inefficient information systems may hurt your business.

Which can cost you money.

And that's a crying shame.

NATO Defense Ministers Back U.S. On Charge of Soviet Arms Violations

By William Drozdiak

Washington Fust Service
BRUSSELS — In the last allied consultations before U.S. and Soviet leaders meet in Geneva next month, NATO defense ministers Tuesday endorsed American comolaints that the Kremlin has violat-

Weinberger and other U.S. officials that described in detail some of the alleged Soviet transgressions of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty and the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation

Several European defense ministers remarked later that any lingering skepticism about the extent of Soviet violations had been removed, but they stressed that such

Mr. Weinberger illustrated his arguments Tuesday with recent satellite photographs that portrayed three installations where the Soviet Union has sited the mobile, intercontinental SS-25 missile. The U.S. says the SS-25 deployment breaks a SALT-2 treaty provision allowing the introduction of only one new strategic missile, which the Soviet Union claimed would be the SS-24. Moscow contends that the SS-25 is merely an upgraded version of the SS-13. But the photographs dising to defense ministers who at-tended Tuesday, indicated that the SS-25 is radically different.

Mr. Weinberger said the Soviet Union also continues to thwart American efforts to monitor their missile program developments through the encryption of test signals, considered to be another vio-

'Romeo' By Delius Is Revived

By Andrew Clark D USSELDORF - Always one of the more innovative and adventurous of the major German opera companies, the Deutsche Oper am Rhein has chosen this season to add to its repertoire three half-forgonen works from the early part of this century. The first of these to appear at the company's Düsseldori house is "Romeo und Inlia auf dem Dorfe" ("A Village Romeo and Juliet") by Frederick Delius. Later in the season, both Duisburg and Düsseldorf will have the chance to see "Penthesilea" by the Swiss composer Othmar Schoeck, and "Osud" by Leos Ja-nacek. Delius never fitted any conven-tional pattern, either in the way he lived or composed. Born in 1862 in Bradford, England, into an immigrant family of German wool mer-chanis, he spent several carefree years as a young man in Florida, studied music in Leipzig and Paris, was a regular visitor to Scandinavia, and then lived comparatively peacefully at Grez-sur-Loing near Fontainebleau. Increasing paralysis and blindness curtailed his acgroup of compositions to a devoted tivity, and after dictating a final amanuensis, Eric Fenby, he died in

But at least Wertenbaker dramatizes the eternal question of women's role in society in an unobvious, undoctrinaire way. She is also very well served at the Court by the sinks. The opera is divided into six the physically dissipated, political from virginal innocence to grieving experience, and of Harold Innocence, linked by intermezzi that by volatile society of 18th-century give it the character of a long symphonic poem. The most famous of these connecting passages is the "Walk to the Paradise Garden." With two excellent productions at Zurich and Darmstadt still fresh in the memory, the new staging by the Deutsche Oper am Rhein faces stiff competition and leaves an imfour scenes, with a painted backdrop of very un-alpine hills, was rudimentary, the lovers' wedding dream was earthbound, and there was too much standard operatic posturing. There was also some unnecessary amphilication of voices, and the producer, Bohumil Herlischka, watered down the contrast of the first two scenes by making do from the start with the two adult principals for Sali and Vrenchen, instead of the two younger voices that Delius calls for.

But the last two scenes, especially the flickering withdrawal of the fairground and the mirage of bluegray moonlight at the Paradise Garden, were theatrical Impressionism at its most captivating.

The cast was well-chosen. As in Zurich, Vrenchen was sung by Ursula Reinhardt-Kiss, an attractive soprano with the right physical and vocal proportions for the role, but who looked and sounded less involved here. The Sali, Zachos Terzakis, displayed a youthful, evenlyproduced lyric tenor of considerable promise. Wicus Slabbert preserved the enigmatic character of the Dark Fiddler and sang with clear-cut, resonant tone. The orchestral contribution under Christian Thielemann was crisp and polished, with plenty of detail picked out from the broader haze of Delius's instrumental palette. But this kind of musical scenepainting requires a special subtlety in phrasing and in the shading of texture, and Thielemann showed insufficient flexibility. It was one further illustration of the work's clusive qualities in the theater.

Three months after imposing emergency rule on parts of South Africa, the minority white government has extended it to new parts. Thus are blacks and other nonwhite citizens being made to pay a further price for the failure of white policy.

The extension is a cruelty. It is also a confession of failure. Nothing in the three-month record indicates that repression serves the current or long-term needs of the white community. Instead the period has seen, in addition to the deaths of hundreds of blacks, a number of firsts: the first riots in the white business districts of Johannesburg and Cape Town, the first white soldier killed policing a black township. The price for whites is going up, too. Emergency rule produced an economic calamity that nobody had foreseen. The emergency panicked South Africa's business-minded foreign creditors, shredding the country's creditworthiness and creating in one swoop a financial crisis greater than any that critics of apartheid had thought they could bring about by the application of political pressure. Extension of emergency rule deepens and advertises the uncertainty that most exercises bankers.

The emergency has also seen an extension of South Africa's international self-isolation. Ronald Reagan, whom the regime had counted on to understand both its difficulties and its manner of treating them, was moved to support the beginnings of official American sanctions. President P.W. Botha apparently feels misunderstood and abandoned: He has de-nounced Mr. Reagan by name for — are you ready? — "shoving [American] Indians into reservations." One wonders whether this expression of pique actually represents Mr. Botha's understanding of the American scene.

The regime imposed emergency rule not simply to keep order but ostensibly to advance "reform" at its own pace. President Botha has dangled hints of political change that, in other circumstances, would have drawn some attention, at least as evidence of possible good faith. Police rule, however, undercut whatever benefits he might have been reaching for.

Mr. Botha's hints; were denounced or ig-nored. Some whites sought to force the politi-cal pace by meeting outside the country with the underground nationalist African National Congress, and were promptly tarred and repudiated. Black opinion in the streets and the townships moved even further away from a position at which "moderate" black leaders feel that they can represent it.

Perhaps President Botha, in meeting protest with more repression, has a method that no one can perceive. Otherwise, he is taking South Africa - blacks and whites - down a oneway road of tension and violence.

Exception in Argentina

Other Opinion

Failure in South Africa

"The action was a little dramatic, but Argentine society is dramatic." So said an Argentine scholar, and he was right on both counts. Raul Alfonsin, whose presidency embodies Argentina's return to constitutional legality. has imposed a state of siege. That means suspending constitutional liberties, but the action needs to be seen in dramatic context.

Many Latin American dictators have imposed cruel martial law, but this is a state of siege with a difference. Mr. Alfonsin's decree does not aim to create another Chile, where last year's crackdown allowed soldiers to sweep protesters off the streets and into concentration camps. The Argentine action bears no similarity to Nicaragua, where a Marxist-Leninist government earlier this month decreed a state of siege so that it could shut down opposition political activity and protest. Nor does it parallel recent Argentine history, when generals regularly overturned elected governments and pushed aside constitutional freedoms. Two years ago this week, the last such military state of siege ended after nine years and the "disappearance" of 9,000 Argentines. Mr. Alfonsin's decree has just the opposite aim: to protect what those other states of siege wanted to eliminate. His goal is to open political debate, extend legal due process and strengthen constitutional rule. He will now have to show how well this dictator's tool can truly be used for democratic ends.

How does imposing a state of siege further constitutional rule? It is not such a paradox in Argentina, where no elected president has completed his mandate in 30 years. To break this pattern, Mr. Alfonsin has insisted on holding the military accountable for its deeds.

He demanded a public trial, which has just completed hearing testimony, for the nine mil-itary officers who presided over the "dirty war" and its disappearances. The verdicts are now pending, and in recent weeks a terrorist bombing campaign, presumably aimed at detablishing department of the control of stabilizing democracy and intimidating the court, has gathered force. The threat could also affect important midterm congressional elections scheduled for next week.

Mr. Alfonsin's state of siege suspends the rights of only 12 persons, six of them officers suspected of being behind the bombing campaign. Imposing it was the only way to assure their detention without waiting for a long judicial investigation, a risk he judged unacceptable. The decree is also a risk. To dilute democracy even briefly, and even if for only a few, can weaken it for all. No state of siege is admirable; in another setting, any suspension of civil liberties would rightly set off the loudest alarms. But Mr. Alfonsin, a democrat, has acted on behalf of democracy. Freedom-lovers elsewhere can only hope that his dramatic action will be both brief and successful.

The PLO Role: An Indispensable Peace Partner

By Harold H. Saunders

WASHINGTON — Has terror-ism killed the Arab-Israeli peace process? Or can new initiatives get it going again? For all the deplorable violence of late, the fact is that the peace process will not succeed without the Palestine Liberation Organization. Leaders on both sides have to find a way to

For years now the secretary-general has been hinting that his emissaries were bringing the Afghanistan problem to the brink of a solution. As usual, no UN solution is in sight. President Reagan, in a speech that inclined more to image-building than reality, an-nounced that he will take over this subject at the Geneva summit. This and the other regional issues he raised will certainly not be solved there next month. But an East-West summit is the only place where they might be solved. How About For a Start, A Test Ban?

By James Reston

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has an odd habit of evading things he can do and concentrating on things he cannot possibly do. His speech at the 40th anniversary of the United Nations is merely the ry of the United Nations and a worth to the United Nations and a month before his Geneva meeting with the Soviet leader, Mikhail Gorbachev. No such policy was disclosed at the United Nations for the simple reason that no such policy exists. Instead Mr. Reagan diverted attention from the arms issue to the settlement of regional disputes and human rights violations in Afghanistan, Angola, Cambodia, Ethiopia and Nicaragua. There is nothing wrong with linking the settlement of disputes to the control of nuclear weapons. In fact, the Charter of the United Nations provides a perfect justification for doing so. The main principle of the Charter is in Article 2, Paragraph 4:

"All members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations." Instead of sticking to this sound principle, Mr. Reagan delivered a provocative sermon, glorifying the U.S. record and the capitalist system while denouncing the Soviet record and the Communist system. In his approach to the summit meeting, President Reagan apparently has two things in mind: First, if he sticks to his "star wars" policy and demonstrates by testing that he can "hit a fly in the sky" --- as Nikua Khrushchev used to boast Mescow could do — that would force concessions from Mr. Gorbachev.

Second, by raising the issue of the settlement of disputes in which the Soviet Union is in violation of Article 2, Paragraph 4, of the Charter, but not those in which the United States is in violation, Mr. Reagan hopes to have the force of Mr. Carbochec's blunt the force of Mr. Gorbachev's tricky offer to can selected nuclear weapons by 50 percent and negotiate a comprehensive test ban treaty. There are many experts in the nuclear field who believe that a ban on the testing of all weapons would be the most effective brake on the arms race, and that it would be infinitely easier to negotiate and verify than all the other schemes so far proposed.

But Mr. Reagan has shown no interest in a comprehensive test ban. His mind runs to fantastic schemes that could not possibly be put in place until long after he has finished his second term. This is true not only in foreign affairs but also at home. He has, for example, presided over the largest budget deficit in Ameri-ca's history, and he proposes to deal with it not by raising taxes and cut-ting deeply into spending but by talk-ing endlessly about a constitutional endment to compel a balanced budget. He will never get it.

That, however, is the way he is. He is not only the greatest escape artist since Houdini, he is an escapist who prefers fantasy to reality.

He started his UN speech by recommending that the dreams of the past be tempered by a new realism. But it is clear that he has no knowledge or memory of the first days of the organization. Those of us who were present at the creation in San Francisco cannot forget that from the first day, members had no illusions that the five permanent members of the Security Council, with their vetoes and their blocs, would agree to observe Article 2, Paragraph 4.

Mr. Reagan has never been a great believer in the United Nations, partly because the Communist and Third World blocs have used it to vilify America. He has good reasons for resentment. But it should not be forgotten that bloc voting was not in-vented by the Russians but by the United States, and precisely during the San Francisco conference, where votes were rounded up for Washingvotes were rounded up for Washington by Adlai Stevenson, Nelson Rockefeller and Thomas Finletter.

If the 40th anniversary of the United Nations was not a howling success, this was probably due partly to the fact that number 40 is not the happiest of birthdays. At 20 you know you can wipe out human stupidity. At 30 you still think you can do it if people will just get out of your way. At 40 you know they will not. Maybe at the 50th or 60th, some other leaders will make the "fresh start" that Mr. Reagan talked about

More than anyone else, Claude Denson Pepper is perceived as the spokesman for 26 million

"Then you'd better give me three of them now," Mr. Pepper said. "I'll come back later for more if I need them."

As with any person his age, it shows. Mr. Pepper often takes afternoon maps, forgets George Smathers, then a congressman, and names and retells stories. Sometimes he asks his said: "I want you to beat that son-of-a-bitch staff to drive him from his congressional office across the street to the House for a vote because Pushed, he becomes irritated, complaining that reporters do not ask such questions of other congressmen.

"I do my best," he says. "I try to put m a full day." He rises early, works late and has taken on a full agenda. Besides protecting Social Security, there are immediate concerns within his own district: Radio Marii, which broadcasts U.S. programs to Cuba, needs $3 million and Florida bankers want him to keep a branch-banking bill bottled up. His 1986 re-election campaign needs money. There is an autobiography to finish.

"So much to do." he says. "So much to do. I'm just too busy to get any older." Later that evening he talks of his wife, Mildred, who died of cancer in 1979 after 42 years of macriage, ER death rocked him: "I never think of myself as an old man. It shocks me in a way to think that I am. But I am actually an old man! I don't believe it. I don't believe it. It happens so gradually. No one wants to go unless you are in some terrible, terrible pain. You just don't want to go."

The real difference between himself and his colleagues, he says quietly, is that "they have more time."

Mr. Pepper, the oldest of four children, grew up poor in rural Alabama.

I remember earning 65 cents per day as a youngster doing plowing," he recalls. "On the way home I stopped at the drugstore and bought a grape juice drink. It cost me 10 cents and, my, it was so delicious, cold and sweet. I remember thinking that I hoped I could see the day when I could finish one of those grape drinks and say, Give me another.'

He paid his own room and board at the University of Alahama by hanling coal and ashes every day at a power plant. Later, he waited tables to help finance his legal education

"I shudder to think what I would have become if I hadn't been able to get a good education," Mr. Pepper says.

After graduation Mr. Pepper taught briefly and then settled in Florida, where he developed a reputation for defending the poor and unedu-cated. In one case, he kept the state from executing one of his clients for 19 years until prosecu-

Mr. Pepper's severe hearing loss could explain much of the criticism levied by Mr. Gold. a radio personality who was milled that Mr. Pepper could not remember his host's name during show breaks.

Mr. Ossofsky recalls a press conference during which Mr. Pepper seemed confused until a reporter repeated his question. "Then Pepper effectively galvanized the room by answering it better than anyone else on the panel."

The most-often quoted incident of Mr. Pepper seeming to be confused occurred in 1984 during a fierce House battle over the MX missile. So crucial was the vote that the Reagan administration had dispatched Air Force jets to ferry back congressmen who might vote for the missile. In the House itself, Mr. O'Neill, cigar in hand, hovered, counting votes, pressuring party members who wavered. In the end, MX opponents won the skirmish in three votes: 199 to 197, 198 to 197 and 199 to 196.

Mr. Pepper, who eventually supported building the MX, did not vote. The next day, the media speculated that Mr. Pepper had avoided the vote as a favor to Mr. O'Neill. But Mr. Pepper denies that.

"The speaker," Mr. Pepper said, "came over and he said, 'If I were a man your age, I'd go home and go to bed.' He said there probably wouldn't be any more votes and if there were any, they would be late at night. I thought about it awhile, and then I went home and went to

Mr. O'Neill's press aide declined to comment on Mr. Pepper's explanation, but congressional aides and reporters found it damaging. "Either O'Neill hoodwinked him, which is his fault, or he simply didn't know what was going on," a congressional aide said.

FT, during a recent debate on whether the House should cut $3 million from the budget of Radio Marti, Mr. Pepper rose without notes and with little preparation delivered a speech so eloquent that his colleagues

REBAN, Czechoslovakia — Jiri Roubek is a burly, 55-year-old bus driver who spends his workdays navigating the conzested streets of Prague and his weeknights in a ramped city apartment.

Every free day from April to October, howevx, Mr. Roubek and his wife can be found here in a cozy two-story cottage along the tree-shad-ed bank of the Berounka River. In theory, they come to relax under their apple trees or in the lazy, leafy warmth of the riverbank. Yet Mr. Roubek says it is here that his hardest labor awaits. "All I do here is work," he said one recent afternoon, proudly pointing out the new stairway and boiler that are his latest projects. He sighed with satisfaction. "Now we have to tend the apple trees. If I want a real holiday, I go somewhere else." Mr. Roubek's zest for chores is not uncommon in Treban, where 600 weekend cottages now surround 200 permanent houses. In fact,

The by-product of this immobility has been a highly centralized, chronically sluggish economy that nevertheless has consistently offered Czechoslovaks relatively high living standards in exchange for relatively little work. The alienation from formal responsibilities has grown so great that it has become a frequent subject of analysis for the official press. The Communist Party newspaper Rude Pravo, for

The Dow was up about 14 points in midafternoon trading but slipped from its highs to close with a gain of 8.74 at 1.368.73, just shy of its record finish at 1,369,29, set Oct. 17.

Advances outpaced declines by a 2-1 ratio. Volume totaled 110.6 million shares, up from 97.9 million Monday.

Analysts said statements by the Federal Reserve Board chairman, Paul A. Volcker, in Toronto-Monday night had a positive impact on trading. Mr. Volcker characterized current Fed monetary policy as "relatively accommoda-tive." He also said he did not expect recent growth in the U.S. money supply to renew

This assertion reassured the equity market that any Fed attempt to slow money growth will not be so heavy handed as to endanger economic growth, said Hugh Johnson, head of the investment policy committee at First Albany. Mr. Volcker's statements were well received in the bond market, which is facing a $17.75billion Treasury refinancing effort this week. The stronger bond market — when the bond market strengthens, prices rise and interest rates fall - helped interest-rate sensitive stocks, Mr. Johnson said.

Harry Villec of Sutro & Co. in San Francisco said the market would surpass the 1,400-mark on the Dow

"Downside risk is limited at this point," Mr. and Pacific Telesis % to 74%.

NEW YORK - The Dow Jones industrial average, the widely watched measure of activity on the New York Stock Exchange, is being changed to include Philip Morris Cos., and McDonaid's Corp., Dow Jones & Co. said

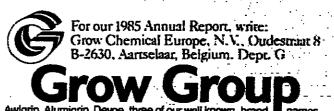

Tuesday. The two companies will replace General Foods Corp. and American Brands Inc., which are on the current list of 30 industrials. Philip Morris, a tobacco producer, is being put on the list because it is acquiring General Foods Corp. Dow Jones said it is taking off American Brands, the fourth-largest U.S. cigarette maker, to prevent the index from becom-ing too heavily weighted on the side of tobacco. The addition of McDonald's, the parent of the fast food restaurants, to the list will insert a services company into the index and compensate for the overweighting of packaged convenience foods companies, Dow Jones said.

Villec said. "Investors can feel some assurance that they will see considerably higher prices near-term."

Beatrice Cos. was the most active NYSElisted issue, easing % to 4314. Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. sweetened its offer for Beatrice to $47 a share.

Returning From Overseas Can Mean a Backward Step

By SHERRY BUCHANAN

ational Herald Tribune

ARIS - It has long been fashionable to move abroad in order to move up in the corporate hierarchy of multinationals, and in many European multinationals, foreign assignments are still a plus for a career.

But in other companies, executives who return to corporate leadquarters after a foreign assignment now find that they may have to take a demotion, make a lateral move or find snother job. And in addition to a certain loss of status, the returning executive usually loses the overseas perks and does not always live as well back home. The "out-of-sight, out-ofphenomenon is one problem. But the continuing stagnation in both the French and British economies means suitable level." that many corporate headquarters are not expanding their management staff. For some executives, there is no job when they return. "It's a very great problem which has been compounded by the recession," said a senior executive with a large British mining multinational. "The career opportunities on people returning from abroad are very much less than a few years ago, Companies are contracting and people that might have left are hanging on to their positions." That company copes with the problem by trying for six months to find an internal position for returning executives while at the same time giving them six months with an out-placement company. If nothing can be found internally, the executive is let go, hopefully to a job found by the out-placement concern. According to the mining company, the majority of returning executives do find comparable jobs within the concern, but they are not necessarily promoted.

"People now going overseas understand that this is what can happen to them," said the mining company executive. "It is one of the many factors making overseas assignments more difficult."

ACCORDING to a recent unpublished study by the Parisbased Inter Cultural Management Associates, all 10 of the French multinationals surveyed said it was difficult to find jobs for executives returning from foreign assignments because of the scarcity of management jobs at headquarters.

Most companies said that, at best, returning executives went back to jobs comparable to the ones held before they left.

"More than sending people abroad, the difficult thing is repatriation and getting people back into the company at a suitable level," said Anders Sondeleus, who is in charge of recruitment at Volvo AB, the Swedish car group. Six years ago, Volvo began designating someone in the home office to communicate regularly with executives abroad about what is going on at headquarters, especially with regard to job openings.

The program has helped Volvo executives plan their reintegration into corporate headquarters, but, Mr. Sondelens said, "it is still difficult to find a suitable position for returning executives."

Many of those returning lose the incentives they were given Many of those returning lose the incentives they were given when sent abroad — including housing subsidies, cost-of-living adjustments, salary premiums as high as 25 percent of base salary in countries considered as difficult assignments and, for U.S. executives, tax-equalization programs.

"Usually returning executives have been used to a much higher standard of living in the foreign country, so they have some problems adjusting, said IH Knipers, director of corporate staff at Philips NV, the Dunch electronist group.

New York Times Service
THOROLD, Ontario — The rumble of the heavy machinery goes on for 24 hours a day these days, as experts and workers try, first, to determine why a concrete chunk of Lock No. 7 stammed into the side of a ship two weeks ago, and, second, to repair the damage. For the more than 70 ships backed up in or outside of the Welland Canal, the cost of the delay amounts to $15,000 a day. The three-week closure, officials have said, will mean a loss of more than $250,000 for many ships.

loss of more than $350,000 for many ships.

But the stakes might be considerably larger, in both money and in the confidence of shippers. The accident here was the second on the St. Lawrence Scaway in less than a year. Last year, a lift bridge jammed in Val-leyfield, Quebec, causing an 18-day shutdown and costing shippers more than $40 nnillion in lost business.

This has resulted in mounting worries that the seaway, portions of which are more than a half century old, is fraying at the edges be-cause of inadequate maintenance.

Iain Angus, a member of Parliament representing Thunder Bay, Ontario, home of a hinge grain port, compared the seaway to an old car. "You can keep the motor tuned, you can change the oil and rotate the tires," he said, "but at some point the muffler is going to fall off. And then next week, it's the motor or something else." Answers to questions about the adequacy of the seaway's upkeep will await investiga-tions by Canada and the United States, which jointly administer the seaway.

What is pointedly clear now, however, is that the waterway has not lived up to the dreams many had for what was once the biggest construction project in the world. Shipments through the 2,300-mile (3,700-kilometer), $4,4-billion waterway have been running at considerably less than two-thirds of capacity in recent years. The St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, the Canadian agency that oversees the seaway, says traffic through mid-October was down 25 percent from last year, which itself was down by more than 20 percent from 1977, the best year.

This year, the seaway's operating deficit was expected to widen to 10 million to 12 million Canadian dollars ($7.3 million to $8.7 million), from 26 million dollars last year. The Welland accident seems certain to increase the loss.

Lock 7

If the Canadian government carries though on its threat to recoup a $37-million surplus the seaway accumulated in better years, the effect could be a fare increase as high as 28 percent at a time when traffic is dwindling. "The seaway is becoming noncompetitive and any increase in costs is just going to exacerbate that problem," said Donald S. Rothwell, president of the Great Lakes Waterways Development Association, an organization of industries dependent on seaway

A big part of the reason for this year's decline was last year's poor grain harvest in western Canada. Canadian grain accounts for a third of seaway traffic, and can logically be expected to rebound.

Australia Eases Investing Rules For Foreigners

MELBOURNE — The Austra-lian government has eased foreigninvestment controls as part of an attempt to loosen its regulation of business. Prime Minister Bob Hawke said Tuesday.

The new rules relaxing the controls took effect immediately, Mr. Hawke said in a speech to the Business Council of Australia.

The regulations included the following:

• An increase in the minimum level at which foreign investment needs official approval, to 5 million Australian dollars ($3.49 million) from 2 miliion dollars. The maximum approval level was also raised, to 10 million dollars from 5 million dollars.

 The abolition of the so-called "opportunities test," which re-quired evidence that local companies had had the chance to match a foreign joint-venture proposal. Mr. Hawke said this rule had been a chronic irritant. • The easing of rules governing acquisition of one foreign-owned company by another. Approval for such acquisitions will now require approval only if the transaction involves more than 20 million dollars, compared with 3 million dollars before Tuesday.

• A promise that the government chant-banking or insurance companies or to acquire interests in existing entities. This action effec-tively extended the one-year moratorium on enforcement of foreign-

· A relaxation of real-estate rules calling for 50-percent local equity. These will apply only if a development is worth more than 10 million dollars, or if it will take more than five years to complete. In addition, the approval threshold for foreign real-estate purchases will be raised to 600,000 dollars from 350,000 dollars. Under the new rules, foreigners

The exchange, the world's only futures market for palm oil, was not "a casino for get-nch-quick schemes," Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad said at a ceremony to mark the new operation.

Mr. Mahathir, in introducing a system of fiduciary guarantees to protect against a recurrence of the defaults, also said the government would allow foreigners to hold

He also voiced hope that the exchange would introduce other commodities and financial instruments and stock indices.

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission cited E.F. Hutton & Co. and its parent firm Tuesday for securities law violations in connection with cash-management practices that earlier resulted in the concern pleading guilty to wire and mail me from activities uncovered during a lengthy Justice Department investigation that led to the firm's guilty plea to criminal charges involving bank overdraft-

ing. Without admitting or denying al-legations in the SEC civil complaint, Hutton consented to a judgment entered in U.S. District Court in Washington. The SEC said its actions were based on Hutton's failure "to dis-close the financial effects of cash concentration practices."

Under the negotiated settlement, Hutton will reimburse the investment companies it managed and their shareholders by more than $1 million.

The firm also is barred from opening any new retail brokerage offices pending an examination of its policies and practices by an independent consultant acceptable to the commission.

The SEC said Hutton will be granted a further temporary exemption to a law requiring auto-matic termination of the right to act as an investment adviser for firms convicted of a felony, pending hearings on Hutton's request for a permanent exemption. And, finally, the SEC said it will continue its investigation "with respect to Hutton's cash-management practices in order to determine whether enforcement actions against individuals or other entities are appropriate." rand. The commission complaint said It was one of several SEC actions Hutton failed to fully disclose its failed to properly administer investment company operations.

It said the firm's annual reports to the SEC "were materially deficient in that they failed to disclose certain bank overdrafting practices which gave rise to a significant component of Hutton Group's net

The $1.025 million reimbursement to some of its customers stems from an SEC finding that Hutton delayed by one day credit-ing dividends to certain mutual nd customers and that others suffered by Hutton assigning a 2 P.M. asset value to some investment shares purchased up to two hours later in the day.

Traders in New York said the decline of the U.S. currency was niggered by a steep drop in US credit-market yields. But European dealers said the markets were reacting to the delayed effect of higher West German and Japanese inter-

Mr. de Lattre said the banks had welcomed the plan, which was introduced three weeks ago by the U.S. Treasury secretary, James A. Baker 3d, and that they had expressed their general support. But he also said that this by no

The substitution of plastic and other materials for steel in autos and other products raises the possibility that much of this market has been lost forever, regardless of steel industry recovery. Technological changes in shipping particularly big increase in ship sizes, have also burt. "About the time the seaway was built, there was a sort of revolution in naval architecture," said Norman Bonson, an economics professor at Lakehead University in Thunder Bay. "Ocean-going vessels became larger and larger.

The new larger ships were much better suited for carrying containers, which could be more easily and quickly transferred to and from trains and trucks at ocean ports. today. That is the principal reason that although the Great Lakes re-gion of the United States produces a fourth of the country's exports, only about 5 percent of them are shipped through the St. Lawrence.

Long gone is the dream that vol-ume in Chicago — closer to Europe through the seaway than New York is by open sea, because of the Earth's natural curvature - would surpass East Coast ports. "Clearly, the seaway is more important to Canada than it is to the United States," Professor Bonson said.

About 20 percent of all cargo shipments in Canada move through the seaway. Particularly for its massive grain shipments, Canada has no alternative to the seaway in shipping to such European destinations as the Soviet Union, which is believed to have purchased four million metric tons of Canadian wheat just before the collapse of the seaway. The United States does.

U.S. grain once shipped via the St. Lawrence has dropped to two million tons annually from as much as nine million a decade ago. A

NOTHING HAPPENS IN CARMINCROSS

By Benedict Kiely; $16.95; 253 pages. David R. Godine, 306 Dartmouth Street, Boston, Mass. 02116.

C ARMINCROSS, where nothing happens, is a small town in Ulster. Mervyn Kavanis a small town in Ulster. Mervyn Kavanagh is a wandering son of Carmineross (Catholic as opposed to Protestant Carmineross) who has been teaching in the United States at a women's college in "the semi-Deep South"—a well-cushioned exile in "a never-never land of dogwood and forsythia and chipmunks and young people." He has also acquired and lost an American wife, who has left him and gone to live in New York, with a boyfriend in fitful attendance.

Mervyn is haunted by dark thoughts of bombs, rubber bullets, political murder, political mutilation, terrorism and counterterrorism — not only in Ireland, but with the Irish example, naturally enough, uppermost in his mind. The year is 1973 (though as Kiely warns us, "the earnest student of atrocities will detect anachronisms" — a number of later incidents are mentioned) and over the previous four years a regular diet of violence has become part of the Northern Ireland scene.

On his journey home, Mervyn samples some very different responses to the new Troubles — one man's gallant freedom fighter is another man's fanatical yahoo. And as the arguments bubble away, the sense of ominous possibilities grows stronger.

Even readers who know of Kiely's comic gift from his previous novels may find it hard to see much scope for comedy in such material. Yet the first thing to say about "Nothing Happens in Carmincross" is that it is often brilliantly funny, and not just in its more boozy or boisterous episodes, that it brings a searing wit to the grim events it describes.

That wit is above all to be found at work in Mervyn's talk and thoughts, in the sudden leaps of his tumbling, fast-flowing stream of consciousness. His mind is packed with quotations, pop songs, learned allusions, running gags, all kinds of odd scraps and echoes — a mind where John Milton keeps company with Dolly Parton, where virtueso mimicry and inspired wordplay come naturally.

He is also a master of abrasive irony, whose mock-rhetoric acquires a rhetorical, almost poetic force of its own. A bomb has been planted

A terrorist unit fails to phone through its u arning it the local population in time, with dreadful results, because it overlooks the fact that another unit has put the telephone exchange out of action: "Should one patriotic perpetrator not remember what another patriotic perpetrator for has recently perpetrated." This is not just a merry tongue-twister, but an implied comment on both the action itself and the inadequacy of the flat or euphemistic words used to describe it in bulletins and communiques.

But then even a word like "wounded." as Mervyn remarks at one point, is "a mild word" when you think of what it can signify. The effect of his black humor, far from distancing us from horror, is to bring it home to us more vividly, to overcome the "mildness" of a settled

AN innocent-looking part-score deal, shown in the diagram, proved a deathtrap for North-South.

Honduran soccer supporters, and never forgive a New York travel Opponents coming to Australia, agent who fouled up their visit to

> The supporters, dispatched to Saint John, New Brunswick, had to watch the match on TV because it was actually played, and lost, 800 miles away in Saint John's, Newfoundland.

And the game itself, which actually put Canada into the finals at the Hondurans' expense, was also a trial for the players. The Honduran team baggage went astray in Miami; alternative shirts were purchased in Saint John's (Newfoundland), and the players stitched their own national badge onto them. Still, it's not everyone who actually fancies playing in Mexico. Bernd Schuster doesn't.

On the night that West Germany surrendered its lifelong unbeaten record in World Cup qualifiers, Schuster the enfant terrible was at a secret address somewhere in Catalonia. His family is lying low after Basque terrorist threats. П

One is tempted to say his country lay low in Stuttgart when after scoring four goals for every one conceded in all previous qualifiers, West Germany lost, 1-0, 10 a Portuguese side that days earlier couldn't stop Malta from scoring twice. Perhaps West Germany, like

Hungary against the Netherlands earlier in the tournament, simply could not muster the will to stove for victory when its own qualification was assured.

Perhaps we are naive to expect that the modern professional should be proud enough, dmiful enough, determined enough to earn his pay by summoning up effort and spirit at every moment in every game.

Franz Beckenbauer deflected thoughts that night by publicly mentioning he would try one more time to persuade Schuster to func-tion alongside Karl-Heinz Rummenigre under the national hanner. A midfield so unimaginative against Portugal (although so rampant everywhere else) needed vi-

Schuster came out of hiding and apparently off the treatment table, to score stupendously for Barcelona in the European Cup tournament last Wednesday. And then to score points off Beckenbauer. He told the magazine Der Spiegel that he would not play in Mexico and that was final. "The expectations for my return were too great," he was quoted as saying. "I alone can't bring about

Would not even try? Where is the man's ambition? Where his patriotism?

In West Germany, come the final selection, Beckenbauer may well have to try again, down on one knee and with words only for Schuster. The player's rebuttal, after all, comes at Halloween, the last romp of evil spirit before All Saints' day.

Down under in Aussie, and over on the plains of Honduras, they may not know too much of All Hallows Eve.

But they'll know the game's the thing so long as its played in the right spirit.

The Royals: Better Than 'Best'

By Thomas Boswell Washington Post Service WASHINGTON - Thanks.

We needed that. After drug trials and a stupid strike following on the tedium of 1984, baseball was ready for the Kansas City Royals. We needed the most preposterous postseason in history to end in the crowning of the marvelous, awful, sounky, lucky Royals as winpers of the World Series.

Are they the worst team ever to take the Series? Let's hope so; these guys deserve to be remembered. Was theirs the greatest never-say-die comeback perfor-mance in baseball history? Let's pretend it was. It's a fact that no Series winner ever before survived six win-or-go-home games.

Stop that whispering out there. We're trying to forget the '81 Dodgers, who won five mustwin games before the Series ever began and then lost the first two to the New York Yankees.

Let's not let the facts get in the way of a fairy-tale ending. Just for today, let's ignore about 10 teams that accomplished comebacks so outlandish it's almost impossible to compare degrees of difficulty. (In recent times, give me the '78 Yankees any day.)

Give Kansas City its due. No team ever did more with less, or had to dig out of deeper holes to do it, than the 1985 Royals. Let's hear it for a loaf of Brett, a slice of Biancalana and a pound of they're our kind of guys. Whoever thought the nation's sixth-graders would be able to pass a spelling bee on Saberhagen, Gubicza, Quisenberry, Leibrandt and Concepcion?

Let's be honest. Could the Royals have won the Series if The Tarp That Ate St. Louis hadn't broken a microscopic bone on Vince Coleman's knee? Don't be silly. Tito Landrum, who batted 360, produced only three runs in the whole Series. Coleman can create that many in one havoc-riddled game,

Could the Royals have won without the fine work of Joaquin Andujar? No way. They should vote the Cardinal astronaut a full

Could Kansas City have won without Don Denkinger? Maybe so, but maybe not, too. St. Louis looked like it never recovered from the American League umpire's bad call in Game 6, which let the leadoff Royal reach base in the ninth inning of a 1-0 game.

Kansas City won 91 regularcason games and had to souceze blood from stones to do it. It had the sixth-best record in baseball and that's about right.

The reason we like the Royals. the reason their triumph will warm baseball fans so much more through the winter than a Cardinal victory would have, is the nature of the people who won. Who really cares about tal-Balboni. We don't even know ent - that the Blue Jays, Cardi-Darryl Motley and Dane lorg, nals. Yankees. Mets and maybe but when it comes to heroes even the Dodgers could beat them over a long fair season? Sometimes it's better when the best team doesn't win. The Royals' owner doesn't have himself drawn around his ballpark on a chanot of beer kegs, nor does he have an odious commercial jingle blaring over the PA system between pitches. Royals Stadium is not a tacky testimonial to the glories of peddling beer. It's a beautiful bailpark full of water fountains.

The Royals' manager doesn't denigrate teams before he plays them and then deny his cheapshot quotes until they're played back to him on a tape recorder. He does not push blame toward his players and away from himself. He doesn't accuse umps of deliberate prejudice when there's no evidence of it. He doesn't lay on the charm for the national TV cameras and, once he gets back to his office, bad-mouth the team that just beat him. When Dick Howser of the Royals makes a hard decision and gets second-guessed nationwide, he stands like a little so!dier in one spot for an hour and. politely, humorously, tells any-one who asks just why he did what he did and why he'd do it

The Royals are easy to like. George Breit, Frank White and Hal McRae — the soul of the team since 1973 — are hardnosed, honest and smart. They play hurt. And they've swallowed postseason losses in 76, 77, '78, '80, '81 and '84 without losing their confidence, drive or leadership.

Dan Quisenberry not only is the best relief pitcher of his time, but a gentleman who minimizes his importance, mourns whenever he lets down his mates (whom he considers the "real players") and is a truly funny fellow.

Some Royals have won tougher contests than baseball games. Willie Wilson went to jail behind a drug rap and came back a stronger man. Lonnie Smith has beaten a bad cocaine habit.

For at least the last 10 years, the Royals have concentrated as much on building a team with character as they have on amassing talent or signing free agents. Many times, like the '77-'83 Baltimore Orioles whom they resemble, they have narrowly failed and been told they would never be world champions until they had more swagger, more muscle and less good humor.

Too soon the Royals will have to begin replacing some of the 35-and-over crowd that has given the club its tone: John Wathan, Greg Pryor. White, Iorg, McRae, Jorge Orta. Then, like the now inert Orioles, they may find how mysteriously difficult it is to build a team that is significantly better than any objective analysis would indicate.

Whether the Kansas City Royals are the best team in baseball is a question of definition. But that they represent what is

In his 37-year career he had 19,806 mounts, 4,349 victories, 2,964 seconds and 2,390 thirds. On Wednesday, Piggott is to leave for New York, where he has a six-day engagement at the Acqueduct

U.S. TV Paid Budd, Decker $200,000 LONDON (AP) - U.S. television paid British teenager Zola Budd

$125,000 and American Mary Decker Slaney $75,000 for competing in a race here last July, it was confirmed Tuesday. Decker won the 3,000-meter contest and Budd finished third. Enormous interest had centered on what was billed as a rematch of their 1984 Olympic clash, in which Decker fell after a tangle with Budd and failed to finish. Mike Turner, treasurer of the British Amateur Athletics Board, disclosed the figures at the European Athletics Union Congress in Oslo. Derek Johnson, treasurer of the International Athletes Club, confirmed that the Amateur Athletics Association had been told of the deal. Budd's cut was paid into a trust fund.

Becker Plans to Skip Australian Open

MELBOURNE (AP) - Wimbledon titlist Boris Becker plans to miss the Australian Open tennis tournament, which begins late next month, the Lawn Tennis Association of Australia announced Tuesday. But the LTAA said it had agreed to a request by Becker's manager, lon Tiriac, to reserve a wild card for the 17-year-old West German in case he changes his mind. Tiriac said that West Germany's reaching the Davis Cup final had been the main reason for the change in Becker's plans. The Davis Cup final against Sweden will be played in West Germany Dec. 20-22. The Australian Open, the year's final grand-slam event, will run from Nov. 25 through Dec. 8.

Nixon Raises Umps' Playoff Pay 40%

NEW YORK (AP) - Former President Richard M. Nixon, acting as a binding arbitrator, decided Monday that major-league umpires will receive a 40 percent pay increase for working additional baseball games in the two divisional championship series.

Nixon said in a statement: "Because the championship series have been expanded by a factor of 40 percent, the working umpires are entitled to a 40 percent increase, which amounts to. . . . $4,000 per umpire, or a total of $48,000 per year for the 12 working umpires for the years 1985 and 1986."

"We're going to eat where the truck drivers eat," I told my wife.

OBSERVER

"If it's as bad as last night's dinner" she said. "I'm going to bring mine outside and pour it in their gas tanks."

Inside was full of big men. Big. big men. Several ran well over 300 on-colored sports shirt and drives a pounds and caught your attention right away because of the intensity with which they were taking aboard eggs, mingled with slabs of ham, bacon and sausage, and the hero-ism with which the chairs supporting them refused to collapse. There were a few women, too.

Although all were in the heavy-weight class. 190 pounds and up. since they were not tattooed I assumed they weren't truck drivers. There were a few men, pretty obviously drivers, who were lean, but packing down breakfast like men who didn't expect to eat again in the present lifetime.

Not a soul among them showed any interest in a stranger wearing a watermelon-colored sport shirt. Menus arrived. I hadn't seen menus like that ever, at any time, at any place, on any road, in all the years I have passed up chances to eat where the truck drivers eat.

Here were people who had never heard of cholesterol, or who, if they had, had said, "Life it too short to spend eating lettuce when you can get two biscuits covered with sausage gravy, topped by two farmfresh eggs sunny side up, and flanked by a quarter-pound of home-fried potatoes.

"Even the home fries taste real."

said my wife. I was deep in a stack of pancakes with butter and maple syrup, topped by three eggs, over easy, and four slices of bacon with four pieces of toast drenched in real butter, so hadn't the energy for conversation.

That's all there is to say. I finally ate where the truck drivers eat, and eat, and eat. I have probably eaten several hours right off my life, but it was worth it, and I'd like to do it again some time if my appetite returns. Since Sunday's breakfast I haven't felt the need to eat a bite.

'Eleni': A Movie Enshrines A Mother's Love for Family

By Nina Darnton

NEW YORK — The small snapshot shows several people sitting around a wooden picnic table in a Greek town. The sun is bright, and the vines and lush Mediterranean vegetation give the sense of an arbor in the garden behind. There are several Greek women, their hair tied in scarves, their faces weathered and lined. and two apparent tourists, a man and a striking young woman with short blond hair.

The man is Nicholas Gage, whose book "Eleni" chronicles the torture and murder of his mother in 1948 by Communist guerrillas during the Greek civil war, and his return to Greece 30 years later to search for his mother's killers. Some of the village women are his relatives, peasants who still live in the village of Lia. The blond woman is Kate Nelligan, who plays the woman who gave her life so that her children might escape, in the film version of Gage's book. "Eleni," in which John Malkovich co-stars as Gage, opens in New York Friday.

The photograph was taken a few months before the film was shot. Gage brought Nelligan to Lia, where he was born and raised until the age of 9. "Nick brought me to the spot where his mother was executed." Nelligan said. "and he just left me there and walked away. I stood exactly where she had fallen, and a woman came by herding her animals. I watched her, and it was as though time had frozen somehow. I walked from the trial site to the spot where she died. I took that same last walk she took, and of course I was deeply moved and upset. But when I played the part, I never felt sorry for her because she never felt sorry for herself. She had lived to get her children out of that crushingly difficult and backward life, and that is what she achieved. That is what my story in the film is about her ultimate triumph." The story of Eleni Gatzoyiannis unfolded during the bitter days of World War II and the Greek civil war. From 1940 until 1949, Greek peasants like Gage's mother suffered invasion, occupation, starvation and brutality at the hands of ideologues: fascist, Communist and nationalist. Eleni's husband was working in the United States, and she dreamed of joining him with their three daughters and young son, Nikola. Her duty as a wife was made clear to her: to stay to protect their home as best she could from occupying soldiers. But after the Communist guerrillas entered the village, it became apparent that her children, the focal point of her life and energy, were in danger. When the guerrillas forced parents to send their young children to be educated in Eastern-bloc countries. Eleni decided she had to act to protect her family, and arranged their escape from the village. It was for this that she was tortured and execut-

The wounds of the civil war have not yet healed in Greece. When Gage and Nelligan arrived in Lia, some outraged residents Gage's story anti-Communist

"There is a sort of policy of national amnesia," said Nelligan.
"When people do talk about it, they start fighting. In the village, one man came to fight with Nick.
He had been on the Communist ride and be said. Nick He side and he said Nick had lied, that those things never happened. He said the nationalists also committed many horrors and that Nick was unfairly indulging in anti-Communist propaganda. Nick answered that his mother was killed, not by Eskimos but by Greeks."

The film was shot in Spain. Gage said they had considered filming in Lia, but that they feared the Communist-dominated film union would disrupt pro-

"Greece is trying to shake loose from a conflict that characterized its postwar history," said Gage, who worked in Greece as a correspondent for The New York Times before publishing his book. "Everyone was encouraged to for-get the past, to bury it," he said. Then along came this book, which presents a strong point of view. It has shaken things up."

The book was a best seller in The New York Times.

Greece in hardback, embraced by some and reviled by others. It inspired a rebuttal, titled "The Other Eleni," by Vasilis Ka-vathas, a journalist who claimed that Eleni's execution was justified and accused her of passing information to the enemy.

The film is less ideological than the book, singling out Katis, Eleni's chief torturer, and the man who ordered her execution, as the villain. "In the book it is demonstrated that all these executions were ordered and approved by the central Communist organization," said Gage. But he hopes that the film and book do something beyond merely encouraging a hardening of partisan positions, each side listing the arrocities committed by the other. "Wounds like this never heal completely," said Gage, "Endings exist only in books and movies. But all my life I searched for ways to repay my mother - of course you can never pay someone for dying for you — but I wanted to do something. The book and the film are a kind of memorial to her. To kill Katis would have focused on my act of revenge and his death rather on her act of courage and sacrifice, and it would have perverted what she wanted for me. Besides, she was the formative influence on my life. She didn't raise me to be a murderer."

"I am convinced that she did what she had to do and never felt any regret," said Nelligan. "I talked to some women who had seen her at the end, and they all had a strong sense that she did not want to die. No part of her wanted to be a martyr, and she tried to save herself. She wanted to live, but even more, she wanted her family to be safe."

Gage agreed. "My mother was one of those people who'd try to find every way to survive," he said, "but who also had standards beyond which she couldn't retreat. There are people like this, and most of them are not famous. My mother wasn't Thomas More, or Raoul Wallenberg. But people like her keep civilization alive."

Nina Darnton is a free-lance writer. She wrote this article for Kate Nelligan as Eleni.
